Details about the Role

Saleh leads a quiet life, balancing his time between home and his job as a custodian at the municipal treasury. He fights against the plan to transform the treasury into a wedding hall, but his efforts falter under the relentless pressure and greed of officials. Saleh champions the library as one of the oldest institutions of knowledge in human history. To him, it is not merely a repository for books; it is a hub of culture, learning, and critical thinking. The library represents a vital symbol of human development and scientific achievement, holding a revered place in any society that values education and knowledge.

Details about the Role

Radia, who happens to be the wife of Saleh, the dedicated librarian, finds herself in a rather unusual predicament as she is compelled to live with him. This unexpected arrangement gives rise to a multitude of hilarious and comical situations that unfold in their daily lives. From Saleh's obsessive tendencies with organizing books to Radia's attempts to navigate the quirks of her husband's library-centric world, the duo often finds themselves in absurd scenarios that spark laughter and amusement. Their interactions, filled with lighthearted banter and misadventures, create an entertaining dynamic that keeps both of them and those around them on their toes.

Name in the series

Mustapha

Real Name

Ibrahim Khai

Details about the Role

Mustafa holds the position of municipal treasury manager, a role that comes with significant responsibilities and challenges. Recently, he has developed a strong desire to shut down the treasury altogether. This decision is not taken lightly, as it would involve navigating complex financial implications and potential consequences for the community he serves. Mustafa's motivations for wanting to close the treasury stem from various factors, including the need for budgetary reform, inefficiencies in current operations, and a vision for a more streamlined approach to managing municipal funds. As he contemplates this drastic course of action, he must weigh the potential benefits against the reactions of stakeholders and the impact on the local government's financial health.

Details about the Role

A ghost, portrayed by the talented actor Rafik Boubaker, unexpectedly materializes from one of the shelves in the closet where he serves as a custodian. This enigmatic spirit introduces himself with an extraordinary claim: he possesses the power to alter a person's fundamental nature through a magical book. Intrigued by this captivating offer, Saleh finds himself caught in a fascinating interplay between reality and fiction. He begins to explore the pages of this mystical book, discovering that each title within it embodies a well-known virtue, such as generosity, courage, chivalry, and selflessness. As Saleh delves deeper into the book's contents, he becomes increasingly drawn into the prospect of transformation, blurring the lines between his ordinary life and the enchanting possibilities the ghost presents.
